From our founding, Tricon has been committed to the highest standards of business conduct in all our relationship with our client, our associates, our business partners and vendors, our government agencies, and our communities. Adhering to highest standards of integrity does more than just help us to avoid the business and personal problem that illegal or unethical behaviour may bring. It advances our industry leadership, making Tricon a better place business partner and trusted contributor to our communities. In this document, you will find our code of conduct & Ethics, which highlights the principles that guide our actions in everything we do. Take the time to read it carefully because understanding and adhering to these principles and policies will help us deliver the best possible service to our clients and achieve the best possible business performance.

The Standards of Excellence

Everyone who works for Tricon is responsible for upholding our values, maintaining a good business environment, and ensuring ethical business practices. You can depend on management to do everything in its power to meet Tricon's standards of business conduct. We are depending on you to do the same. The following pages summarize the principles and policies contained in our Code of Business Conduct and Ethics, which applies to all employees, officers, and directors.

Always obey the law

We will conduct our business in compliance with all laws and regulations that apply to the market we serve worldwide. Complying with law in letter and spirit is the minimum standard we all must meet in carrying out our responsibilities at Tricon.

Transparency and Auditability

All directors, senior management and employees shall ensure that their actions in the conduct of business are totally transparent except where the needs of business security dictate otherwise. Such transparency shall be brought about through appropriate policies, systems and processes, including as appropriate, segregation of duties, tiered approval mechanism and involvement of more than one manager in key decisions and maintaining supporting records. It shall be necessary to voluntarily ensure that areas of operation are open to audit and the conduct of activities is totally auditable.

Protection of Confidential Information

No director, senior management and employee shall disclose or use any confidential information gained during employment/ association with the Company for personal gain or for the advantage of any other person. No information either formally or informally shall be provided to the press, other publicity media or any other external agency except within approved policies.

Company Facilities

No director, senior management and employee shall misuse Company facilities. In the use of Company facilities, care shall be exercised to ensure that costs are reasonable and there is no wastage.

Follow our inter policies and procedures

Our business units and functional departments all have policies and procedures that we must follow in doing our jobs. While these policies and procedures cover a wide range of issues, one aspect is crucial: we must maintain records and accounting control for the entire company that accurately and fairly reflect our business activities, income, and expenses. All employees must follow these policies and procedures and cooperate fully with Tricon's internal and external auditors.

Ensure employee safety and health

Providing a safe and healthy working environment is extremely important. We are responsible for complying fully with all environmental, health and safety laws and regulations. Every employee is expected to prevent accidents by maintaining a safe work environment and following safe work procedures and practices.

Treat people with respect and fairness

One of our most basic beliefs is that everyone should have the opportunity to work. Beyond complying with applicable employment laws worldwide, our obligation is to ensure fairness in the hiring and advancement of all employees without discrimination.

We all have a personal responsibility for maintaining a safe and respectful work atmosphere, free of abusive or unprofessional conduct. Every employee is expected to respect other people as individuals and treat them with dignity.

Our commitment to safety and respect in the workplace also includes our full support for international efforts to promote ethic principles related to the prevention of the exploitation and abuse associated with the trafficking of human beings. We also expect commitment to these principles from all organizations with which we do business, and we will not do business with any organization that engages in or takes advantages of the trafficking of human beings.

Deal with client and suppliers fairly and honestly

All buying and selling, and all agreements made on Tricon's behalf, must be done in a responsible manner. This means that we must: Never request or accept cash or other favours such as discounts, supplies or gifts in connection with any contract or agreement, or in acquiring goods or services.

- Never promise or give cash or other favours to secure favourable treatment or consideration for Tricon from any client or supplier.
- Never directly or indirectly give anything of significant value to representatives of governments, labour organizations or current or prospective business relationships.

If you become aware of or involved in a situation involving bribery or other inappropriate compensation, it is your responsibility to report the matter to your TL or manager or compliance officer immediately. Avoid conflicts of interest

Charges of misconduct can arise any time our personal interests and those of our company appear to differ. That's why it is important to avoid any relationship or activity that could compromise, or even seem to compromise, your ability to make objective decisions on the job. Examples of conflicts may include:

- Owing or having a substantial financial interest in a company that is a Tricon client, competitor, or supplier.
- Consulting to or working part-time for a client, competitor or supplier without your manager's knowledge and approval.
- Hiring a relative to work in your own department or other areas within your scope of responsibility and authority.
- Giving preferential treatment to business partners or potential partners where a relative is employed.
- Making political contributions (in money or personal services) in Tricon's name instead of your own.
- Running for election to, or accepting, a political office without prior management knowledge and approval.

Never try to influence official decisions through improper conduct

Strictly prohibits any company worldwide from paying bribes or otherwise trying to improperly influence government officials, political parties or candidates for political office even if such a payment is requested and called something other than a bribe, and even if it takes place through a third party, such as a law firm.

Regardless of whether you think your country allows some type of payment, such as a so-called "facilitating payment", to help speed a decision or an action that would otherwise be delayed, you should first consult with your manager to make sure that you won't violate any law in the country.

Always compete fairly

It is our policy to compete openly and fairly and to comply with antitrust laws worldwide. Antitrust laws typically prohibit all competing companies from:

- Agreeing upon prices or price ranges
- Exchanging bids with each other
- Allocating territories, clients, or markets
- Setting up a rotation method of bids among competitors
- Limiting or restricting delivery schedules
- Fixing discounts, rebates, or terms

If a competitor raises such a topic or any other matter that you believe could violate antitrust laws or our company policy, you should immediately and firmly decline to discuss it. You should then promptly notify your manager or compliance officer of the matter and obtain legal advice, if needed.

Respect our corporate assets, idea and information

Tricon's assets are more than just our money, property, equipment and supplies. They include our ideas, business plans, technologies, client lists and other proprietary information. The theft, misappropriation or unauthorized use of any of these assets is a serious matter and will be treated as such. All employees should respect Tricon's assets as they would their own.

In dealing outside of work, it is especially important to be careful not to divulge important information about the company or its business, even accidentally. Examples of matter that should not be discussed outside of the company include:

Financial results and business plans that have not been publicly disclosed, such as:

- Potential mergers, acquisitions, or joint ventures
- New or planned products or services
- New contracts or the loss of contract
- Contract term
- Prices
- Proprietary information provided to us by clients, suppliers, or any firm with which we do business

Remember that any contact with a competitor including casual conversation and exchanges of information can carry risks to our competitive positioning. It is best to avoid such discussions, whether they occur in a large, formal group or in a social setting, for example, following a professional or trade association meeting.

Remember, too, that confidential information about our company, our client, suppliers or other with whom we do business may never be used for our own personal advantage, or to be benefiting our friends or family members. This includes "insider trading" that is, buying or selling stock or other securities issued by Tricon, its clients, suppliers, or other business partners, based on information that is not available to the public.

This includes newspapers articles, information from web sites, etc., which is generally protected by copyright law regardless of whether a copyright statement is noted on the specific documents.

Safeguard computer and telecommunication system Software and data must be protected from damage, alteration, theft, fraudulent manipulation, unauthorized access and disclosure company and client information. Each employee must follow measure to keep this information secure. Where appropriate, password should be used on all computers and revised periodically. Confidential information should not be left unattended on computer screens if there is a chance that an unauthorized person could view it. Employees may not use these devices to send messages that contain offensive or defamatory content. All material stored, processed, sent, or received on company systems is the company's property, and is subject to local laws.

When in doubt: an ethical compass

Most of the time, common sense and sound business judgment are our best guides in determining appropriate conduct. Sometimes, however, we need a compass to determine what course of action to follow. If you yourself in a situation where you are not sure of the ethical implications of action, ask yourself a few simple questions:

- Are my actions legal?
- Am I being fair and honest?
- Is this action in the best interests of Tricon and the client we serve?
- Will others view my actions positively in the future?
- Do I believe that I am acting in an ethical manner?
- If my actions were reported in the news media, how would I, and my company, be perceived?
- Is this the right thing to do?

If you still need clarification, ask your manager or compliance officer to help answer your questions and direct you to additional resources.

Reporting and administrator of this policy

All employees are expected to bring all business issues and developments that could adversely affect the company's performance or reputation to management's attention, including any violations of standards of ethical business conduct.

SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY

Tricon encourages its team members to be brand ambassadors on behalf of the company. As the online environment continues to mature, the opportunities for Tricon team members to communicate is evolving too. While social media creates new opportunities for individual expressions, it also creates lot of responsibilities. As a Triconite, you are perceived by our customers, partners, and any other parties as a representative of Tricon. Your participation on social media platforms is a reflection on Tricon; if it is with reference to your work, or not.

This policy deals with the basic steps in your social media journey. Social media applies not only to Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn, but also applies to other platforms you may use that include user conversations, which you may not have included under social media. Platforms such as YouTube, Flickr, blogs, and wikis are all part of social media.

When you mention your employer details on social media; you can proudly disclose that you work for Tricon. This also emphasizes on the fact that you would not mention names of any customers whom we work with; on your social media profiles (as your employer or customer) or during any conversations on any of these platforms, as it would be a breach of confidentiality terms too. You must also refrain from sharing Private and Sensitive Private Information about other Triconites clients, partners, and any other stakeholders.

Social media communication spreads swiftly and your posts gets accessible within seconds. This makes it extremely tricky to correct an inaccurate message once you have shared it. The best thing to do is double check all content before you share it, both for precision and to make sure it fits into our confidentiality terms and any restrictions that may apply.

Your social media engagements must be carried out in the right manner. If you are not an expert on a subject, share details with the concerned authority rather than responding yourself. Please respond on behalf of Tricon only if you are officially authorized to do so.

All Triconites must refrain from avoid posting content that might contain legal inferences, intellectual property that belongs to other companies, and offensive language. Everything you post online can be traced back to you, so one must be double sure on what they post on these platforms. Your post may have been shared and saved already and would not help even if you delete it later. Even something inappropriate in your profile may not stop someone else online from complaining about your activity and noting that you work for Tricon.

If you participate in social media activities as part of your job role at Tricon, or an account created for us, that account may be considered Tricon property. If that account is Tricon property, you will not try to change the password or the account name or create a similar sounding account or claim any ownership of the contacts and connections you have gained through the account, while leaving the company. This does not apply to personal network that you may access at work but would certainly apply to all other business- related accounts.

However, if you do not follow the standards laid out above while engaging in social media channels, you could face serious consequences in agreement with the laws of the country where you are employed. Expecting everyone to go through these basic points clearly and comply to them as well.
